

Map Reduce

Large data sets to be processed are divided into smaller data chunks and distributed among processing application components. Individual results are later consolidated.

How can the performance of complex processing of large data sets be increased through scaling out?

