

Elastic Queue

The number of accesses via messaging is used to adjust the number of required application component instances.

How can the number of required application component instances be adjusted based on monitored asynchronous accesses?

