

Transaction-based Processor

Components receive messages or read data and process the obtained information under a transactional context to ensure successful processing.

How can a processing component ensure that messages are processed and data is persisted successfully?

