

Processing Component

Processing functionality is handled by elastically scaled components. Functionality is made configurable to support different customer requirements.

How can processing be scaled out elastically while being configurable regarding the supported functions?

